

John Chenoweth

John Chenoweth is an associate professor and the Chair of the Information Technology/Business Education department in the College of Business and Economics and a co-director of the Wisconsin Center for IT Services at UW-Whitewater. Prior to UW-Whitewater, he was an assistant professor at East Tennessee State University. John has been doing web design and development work since the first popular web browser, Mosaic, was released in 1993.

As part of the Wi-CITS team, John and Paul Ambrose provide primary direction on all client projects.

John is also an Associate Director with the UW-Whitewater Global Business Resource Center.

John holds undergraduate and graduate degrees in Computer Science and a doctorate in Educational Leadership and Policy Analysis.